In response to your recent request for information regarding;

1. In the 2022-23 and 2023-24 financial years please state (i) how many of your police officers (not civilian staff, specials or PCSOs) were the subject of a disciplinary sanctions of ANY description because they were found to have had sex while on duty, and (ii) how many of these officers were dismissed from the force?

2. Of these officers please provide a breakdown between (i) male officers and (ii) female officers?

3. Of these officers please provide a breakdown between (i) those having sex with a fellow officer, (ii) those having sex with a member of the public, and (iii) those having sex with a fellow officer and a member of the public (although obviously not necessarily at the same time)?

NOTE: This question relates to disciplinary hearings that concluded and were recorded in the 2022-23 and 2023-24 financial year regardless of when the actual incident took place or when the allegation was first investigated.

On 27th March 2023 North Wales Police held a Misconduct Hearing for a male officer who had been involved in an inappropriate sexual relationship with a female victim of crime. The officer had resigned but the Hearing panel would have dismissed him had he not already resigned. The allegation did not specify if the conduct was on or off duty.
