2025/504 - Wynnstay hunt

In response to your recent request for information regarding;

I'm looking for information on the amount of times police were called to wynnstay hunt by Cheshire monitors sab group from July 2024 to March 2025.

We have completed a keyword search of I/CAD Event logs for the term 'Wynnstay Hunt'.

We have then manually examined each I/CAD event of which there are 28 during this time frame to see if there is any mention/indication that the informant is from Cheshire Monitors Saboteur group.

Please note the following:

- Not all 101 calls have a CAD event created.
- Due to the search being specific, the accuracy is reliant on the caller reporting to use the wording 'Wynnstay Hunt' specifically.
- As with the above, there is also reliance on the communications operative taking the call to type in the words 'Wynnstay Hunt' exactly as per the FOI request.
- This could be incorrect due to misspellings or not specifically noting 'Wynnstay' (just hunt) etc. in the CAD event log.
- As we cannot query the calls we can only query the I/CAD event. Some I/CAD events may receive more than one call from Members of the Public providing information and they would not be counted as separate contacts due to limitations with the system.

We are also unable to confirm the identity of a caller as this would be a breach of the Data Protection Act:

The information you have requested constitutes personal data of which you are not the subject and disclosure of the information to a member of the public otherwise than under the Data protection Act 2018 would contravene the data protection principles.

Section 40 is a class based exemption, therefore it is not necessary to evidence harm caused by disclosure.

The data protection rights of a third party would be breached by disclosure, therefore section 40(2) is an absolute exemption and a Public Interest Test is not necessary. This is so because personal data is governed by another law (The Data Protection Act 2018) and there are two elements to this exemption.

All requests made under FOIA are applicant blind. A request must be treated as such and a public authority will always view any disclosure as into the public domain. Thus North Wales Police must be satisfied that any release of information will be potentially available to the general public. It is therefore on this basis that the following is relevant.

The first element of this exemption is engaged if the information requested constitutes personal data and is made by the data subject. The information will be covered by section 40(1) and the request will be dealt with under the Data Protection Act, rights of access.

The second element of this exemption is engaged if the personal data is about someone other than the applicant. Where someone makes an application for information other than the data subject, disclosure of that information will often constitute a breach of the Data Protection Act covered by section 40(2).

Personal data is regulated under the principles of the Data Protection Act and when information contains personal data about a third party it can only be refused if disclosure would breach any of the data protection principles.

As previously highlighted, any disclosure under the FOIA is a public disclosure and release of the identity of an individual would breach principles 1 & 2 of the Data protection Act 2018.

These principles require that: 1) the processing of personal data for any of the law enforcement purposes must be lawful and fair and 2) the law enforcement purpose for which personal data is collected on any occasion must be specified, explicit and legitimate.

'Data subjects' are provided with certain legal enforceable rights under the Data Protection Act 2018. The fact that the information is held for lawful policing purposes, disclosing it onwards would breach the principles, and would be incompatible with the data subject's right that their data is held securely. By disclosing this information, the force could be subject to enforcement proceedings under the act if it breaches any of those principles.

Therefore, in accordance with the Freedom of Information Act 2000, this letter acts as a Refusal Notice under section 17 (1) of the legislation.
